Students are expected to attend and participate in the class regularly. The instructor will assign homework, give tests and take class roll from time to time. Please be advised that late homework will not be accepted. The textbook should not be the only source of obtaining knowledge for international finance. Taking class notes, reading journals, newspapers, magazines, and browsing the websites of related topics are highly recommended. Each student will be responsible to present a related topic in the class. General performance during the whole semester will account for 30% of the final grade. There will be one mid-term (30%) and one final examination (40%). Students should take the exams in class with your classmates. Cheating in any forms will result in the students' failure in this course.
