課程描述 Course Description

This course aims to develop the analytical and diagnostic capabilities of MBA students, making them judge a firm's positives and negatives respectively. Using case studies, field trip with deep interviews, and in-class discussion, students can conduct a comprehensive report about a firm and explain the details of analysis to the owners of the firm. Also, we expect students can provide meaningful and useful strategic suggestions to the firm's future operations.

Students have to possess the knowledge related to the fields of general management, economics, industry organization, financial management, human resource management, leadership, strategic management, merger and acquisition, and research methods. Integrating the interdisciplinary knowledge, students can earn advanced management knowledge beyond the basic training of fundamental courses of regular MBA programs.

We will start with a presentation-lecture-discussion format to enhance students' advanced strategic management sense. Students should be ready about the required readings or topics for further discussion in the class. Participants will be grouped by no more 3 persons, and the group will be assigned to present the readings or topics of that session in about 20 minutes. Lecturing and discussion will be also included in each session as well, and any supplementary documents, for instance, studied cases, will be released if any. Also, lecturers will have the rights to adjust the processes if necessary.
