	課程目標 Course Objectives
Comparative Politics is a vast field that attempts both to study the domestic politics of nation-states and develop generalizations about key political themes such as democratization, revolution, state and nation formation and evolution of political institutions. The course will give an overview of the theoretical and methodical basis of the comparative politics. On the example of typical representatives of parliamentary, presidential and direct-democratic political systems the different structural principles with it the different political processes and political results should be explained.
