Course Outline

Course Objectives:

Financial instruments are the main tools of investing, financing and hedging activities for the business.

The topics of how to disclose the information about financial instruments held by business are important for investors, creditors, managers, auditors, and analysts etc.. This course introduces students the characteristics of financial instruments and compares the general accepted accounting principles for financial instruments in USA, Taiwan, and international financial reporting standards. To encourage active learning, each student is required to present on assigned topics and enthusiastically discuss in each class.
