課程目標 Course Objectives
This course aims to give students a better understanding of the science fiction genre: not just an entertaining genre full of interesting wonders and fantasies but also a heuristic one that stimulates critical thinking and philosophical exploration. Aiming to guide students to re-examine our present reality from as many aspects as possible, the selected works are chosen to cover the following issues our contemporaries are in urgent need to confront: the real beauty and force of life oppressed by the so-called civilization that claims to protect humans from danger and horror, and the increasing blurring between fiction and reality, or artificiality and originality, due to the development of technology of simulation. Moreover, to emphasize the significance of the change of media our time rely on to carry information, that is, the shift from printed words to images made of digital signals due to the development of media technology, this course also takes films seriously as the teaching materials for textual analysis and extended discussion.
